

Hypothesis

Test

Reassess

Isn't this what we do in the clinic?

The Process of Inquiry and Discovery

Being exposed to research practices has made me a much better therapist.

PROVING YOURSELF WRONG

The goal in research is not to verify, but to falsify.

In several cases, that has been life-changing for a client's condition.

Better Questions

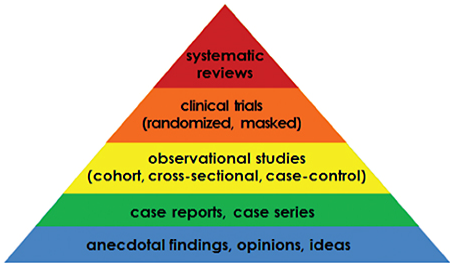

In the clinic, we strive toward an acceptable level of uncertainty.

Knowing full well...

Research Pyramid

All formal inquiries began with an informal question.

What questions and insights surface in the clinic?

A client asks, "When should I come back?"
Clinicians are left to figure this out by themselves.

PBRN: A Possible Bridge
Between These Two Worlds